Dear Mr. Lott:

I have just received your letter of 14 December and am very uncomfortable about my letter to you being publicized. I have no desire to have any attention attracted to my problems with the Macmillan Company or to myself. If anyone wants a copy of the book, I will send it for $25 so long as I have any, but I do not seek controversy or notoriety. We do not know why my book was suppressed, and I do not believe your reason is the correct one. In any case I have no desire to be suppressed personally myself. Will you please remove copies of my letter to you from any public place.

I am suprised at the communications you enclosed between you and Macmillan. I assume you ordered more than a dozen copies if they wanted $157.50 in advance for your order. Why did you want so many? Is there that much demand in your area?

I am writing in haste as our semester is ending and my grades must be in today. I may write again later, after the holidays.

* Incidentally your letter which just arrived had been opened after it was sealed and then re-sealed with scotch tape. I assume you did that yourself. But I would advise you that whenever you do that, you should tell the addressee that it was done by you and not by some outside snooper.

Best wishes for the holidays,

Sincerely,

Carroll Quigley

* I did not open and re-seal this letter. I so advised Prof. Quigley and he gave no reply. There was no further correspondence.

This copy made because the original letter was 2 pages long, hand written, and hard to read.

IMPORTANT NOTE: On pages 550/555 of Tragedy & Hope, Prof. Quigley openly states that he is Pro Pluralism and on page 950 tells how he was allowed to study the "secret records" of the "Round Table Groups", the network that is putting "Pluralism" into operation WORLD WIDE! (thru page 956)
